My Own Private Calenture: Poems Mr. Fernelle C. Rodriguez

Here are poems that are unabashed and unforgiving. The best of these poems are lyrical and wonderful to read and recite. Rodriguez has a distinct voice. His utterances are subtle on the first reading, but reading it again one will realize the depth and impact of each word. The poems contained here will endure and flourish. From the opening poem, “My lightning wears no shroud” to “Death every noon naps/ in Eden” to the last poem, “A horse with a horn,” the utterances are captivating and electrifies.
