Take It - Part One & Two DJ Stone, B.E. Raj

Part One: Jenny Collins is convinced she's more likely to find Bigfoot in the middle of downtown Boston than have a decent romp in the sack. She's starting to wonder if maybe all the lackluster love making has more to do with her than she's been willing to admit. Her days are spent drudging away in a male driven career where the best she can do is apologize for existing as she inches her way up the ladder. Just as she's about to throw in the towel, a chance encounter with a captivating stranger has her holding onto the hope that her thirst for passion may be quenched.

The only problem is the stranger, Harrison Burke, turns out to be a colleague. Sleeping with him would be highly unethical and probably illegal, which only seems to make her want him more. After Harrison convinces Jenny that nothing will ever change in her life unless she learns to take what she wants, she jumps head first into a sea of unimaginable pleasure and lust. Will she be able to survive the storm that ensues or will she be so blinded by the frenzy of passion that she doesn't even see it coming?

Part Two: Everything in Jenny's life is broken - her career, her car, her body, and her heart. The fog that ran her off the road was as unexpected as Harrison's betrayal. Unsure how to repair all the things he's destroyed, she retreats, giving up any fight she once had in her.

Unable to trust her own judgment, she gives herself over to the people in her life who claim to know what's best for her. Blaming Harrison's foolish advice to take what she wants, she decides instead to accept what's given to her. Outwardly she manages to maintain this new way of life, but inside the fire that Harrison set in her still burns uncontrollably. Her desire for him has not diminished at all.

Given the chance will her need for Harrison outweigh her better sense, landing her back in his arms? Can he prove himself worthy of her forgiveness before it's too late?

This book contains sexual scenes and situations not suitable for readers under the age of 18.
