Bantam Books Paperback No. A1229; 2nd printing (New Edition) Mar 1954; first printing Dec 1951; original copyright Jan 1950. 282 pp. Size MMPB. Binding intact; no loose pages; spine shows a midline crease but undamaged. Covers and pages clean and unmarked throughout, with some minor shelf wear to the covers' edges. This copy is indeed in VG condition. The book contains six essays from Andre Gide, Richard Wright, Arthur Koestler, Stephen Spender, Ignazio Silone, and Louis Fischer on their attraction to and their subsequent disillusionment with the philosophy and political policy of communism in the 1930s and 1940s. One of the earliest books to give the insiders' viewpoint and to discuss communism as an attractive philosophy. Contains the Editor's Introduction, who was a Member of Parliament in UK who personally solicited the writers for their essays. I'm not certain why this printing is described as "the new edition" since I have a copy of the Dec 1951 printing and the text appears to me to be the same.
