A world where people live at one with nature – can they defend it against their ruthless visitors?

When Miwuch invaded Bradapol to plunder its resources and strip it bare, Velvak defeated him against all odds.

Velvak should be happy and enjoy his new home world, but he knows that there are others who will follow. Will they succeed where Miwuch has failed, and turn paradise into a wasteland?

The Security Council continues to treat him as an ignorant outworlder and scoff at his ideas. Although Navbed, his archenemy, continues to be a thorn in his side, his new friends Lenvo, Kana and Qevo want to help. But can they?

When the next unfriendly visitor brings biomechanical men to help in the fight, Velvak's friends are at a loss – coming from a world which has no modern technology, they had no idea that such creatures existed. How can mere mortals defeat them with sticks and stones?

Was Velvak's previous victory pure luck, or can he do it again?
