For Women Looking Toward the Changes and Challenges of the Middle Years

Women of all ages wonder if they can ever accomplish or . . . experience all of their dreams, and especially at those significant moments in the crossroads of life. But few women dare broach their personal concerns with anyone else and are left to battle their fears and questions alone.

Two women, friends since college days when Anita Higman was eighteen and Ruth Vaughn was thirty-eight open their hearts and let readers in on their season of sharing that began on Anita's fortieth birthday. You'll chuckle and get teary-eyed at Anita's compelling questions and Ruth's insightful responses.

Fresh, honest observations on significant matters that concern all women relationships, anger, sex, appearance, fear, worry, priorities, focus, sacrifice, and service.

Delightfully wise and witty exchanges between an older Christian mentor and her younger friend
