This is the age of the wild child. Everywhere you go, food store, playground, friend's home, you are confronted by demanding, disrespectful children and adolescents and their intimidated, helpless parents. These are not just children of one special age but children of all ages, from the tantruming toddler to the rude adolescent. Misbehavior among children and adolescents can be anticipated. That is the normal challenge thrown down before the parents. This is the essence of their job as parents. They must deal with and teach from these children's negative behaviors. But it is not happening. A large number of today's children are out of control, particularly around their parents, and the mother and father seem clueless as to what is expected of them. This book contains strategies on how to prevent these problems and what to do should out-of-control behaviors burst forth from your child.
