Thanking Harry The Potter Simon Huggins

Thanking Harry The Potter is a collection of thirty-two selected poems written over a period of ten years by the author, Simon Huggins.

The work is an eclectic mix of poetry, ranging from the opening "Life Plan", with its wry and pithy look at how we live today, to the startling conclusion, "Programmed End" - styled in the form of a computer program, with its all-too-human conclusion.

The eponymous poem, "Thanking Harry The Potter" celebrates the fate of many-a-talent that, at least for now, has not met with the huge recognition of some authors - ;-)

This is a broad-ranged collection, with something to appeal to everyone. It is funny, poignant, sometimes surreal, sometimes brutal. But always honest...

From 'City Rhythm':

We do the Kings-Cross Shuffle
at Five, all tubes converge nether-glazed, tube-medicated we could reach ahead, all make a cha-cha train.

From 'Personal World':

His fingers scampered as a mouse;
Heart cold as circuit solder.
Letters and Poems would always stay in clicky nested folders.

From 'Opera':

Average morning, I trudge your average stairs down to check the mail that isn't there at the doorstep.
It's Bank Holiday, Jubilee hurrah. Outside the street is dead
